The Outcast's Monody.

Bleak winds of winter, sobbing and moaning,
Pluck not my rags with your pitiless hand!
Here in the darkness, cold and despairing,
Homeless and friendless, starving, I stand!

Scourged by the white, icy whisps of the tempest,
I wander forlorn on my desolate way—
Forgotten of earth, and forsaken of Heaven—
Too frozen to kneal, and too hungry to pray.

I look at the stately and palace-like dwellings,
That line with their grandeur the pathway I tread;
I fancy the brightness and warmth of the hearth-stone,
The plentious board with the meat and the bread;

I see the heads bowed with a reverent meaning—
A blessing is breathed o'er the sumptuous fare:
Will it rise to the ear of the pitiful father?
Or die of the cold, like the poor outcast's prayer?

Hark! the chime from the church tower above me,
Drops solemnly down through the whirl of the storm;
Ah, me! could I pass through the gate to the portal!
Sleep there and dream it was lighted and Warm!

No room in the dwellings—no room in the churches—
No room in the prison—I've committed no crime—
Is there no room in the bed of the river, I wonder?
Deep down in the pier, in the ooze of the slime?

Mock on, taunting wind! I can laugh you an answer;
An hour and your bitterest breath I'll defy!
Since bars shut me out of a home among mortals,
I'll knock at the gate of God's home in the sky.

Yet, no—never—no! Avaunt thee, vile tempter!
The hand against life is a cowardly hand!
With Heaven supporting, I'll struggle and triumph,
And find my reward in yon Beautiful Land.

THE BABY MYSTERIES.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into here.

Where did you get your eyes of blue?
Out of the skies as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and spin?
Some of the starry spikes left in.

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheeks like a warm white rose.
I saw something better than any one knows.

Whence that three-cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get this pearly ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into books and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherub's wings.

How did they all come just to be you?
God thought about me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought about you, and so I am here.

ATTACKED BY STOWAWAYS.

Ay, ay, shipmates, I know it is my turn now, so hold up while I get wind, said old Jack Casewell, as we lay becalmed off St. Verne one sultry day in August, and to pass away the time, that hung rather heavily on our hands, were engaged in story-telling.

"Let's see," he began, after a moment's reflection, "it was in the season of '56, that I hired under old Captain Warrenton, who run a schooner on the coasts of the Gulf. She was a small craft, of not more than a hundred and fifty tons burden, and on the trip I am speaking of was loaded at Mobile with a cargo for New Orleans.

"Besides the skipper and myself, then a lad of only fifteen, there was but one hand. As the craft was easily handled, and the runs short, Captain Warrenton seldom ever shipped more than four; and on this time, when he got ready to sail, and one of the men couldn't be found, he concluded to start with me and the other one, a sailor named Ned Allen, for there was a prospect of a quick and easy passage.

"There was great excitement in Mobile at the time over the escape of a couple of villains from the jail, who had been recently captured and were waiting trial for murder. I don't believe a tougher pair of rascals were ever found in Alabama than Ruell Victor and Dennis Lorne. They had killed as many as half a dozen persons, to say nothing of other crimes without number of which they were guilty.

"You may guess that their escape created no little disturbance, and they were more dreaded than ever.

"The authorities did their best to recapture them, but no trace of the desperadoes could be found, and the day we left port three thousand dollars reward was offered for them, or one-half that sum for either of them.

"Well, we had a fair wind for a start, and ran down the bay, standing off between the Dauphin and the Point at about six.

"About that time I had occasion to go into the fore-peak to get some rope-yarn. Now we had no forecastle partoed off from the hold, as there was room enough for all in the cabin, and we had this stowaway in between the bows, where we chuckled away our old trumpery.

"I was hard at work unlaying a piece of rope for the yarns, when I thought I heard a noise among the boxes in the hold. Listening a moment with my ear close to the bulk head, I knew some one was in there. As the captain and Allen were above, I wondered who it could be, and kept perfectly still, to see if I could be.

"I was not kept in suspense long, for pretty soon I heard a man speak, and then another answered him.

"You may believe I was all attention then, and I soon learned that our passengers were none others than Ruell Victor and Dennis Lorne, the desperadoes who had escaped from the Mobile jail!

"From what they said, I found that they had crawled into the hold and stowed themselves away so well that we had not seen them when we had finished loading. They had got provision enough to live on a day or two, and were planning to come on deck at dark, overpower us and put to sea. They were armed, and, what frightened me the most (for you must remember I was only a boy, though nearly as large as I am now,) they had hired Ned Allen to help them! This would make them three against the captain and myself.

As they had been further aft when I first came down, and were now getting back to their old corner, I felt that they had not heard me, so I crept back to the deck as quietly as posible.

"We were then leaving the light-house out of sight and it would soon be dark, so that I was anxious to tell the skipper what I had discovered.

"As I came up from the fore-peak, he was at the helm, while Allen was at the main sheet. I guess I must have looked a little startled, though I tried to appear calm, for as I went aft he asked me what was up; but I only shook my head, saying I didn't feel very well, not daring to say any more for fear of arousing Allen.

"I saw Captain Warrenton mistrusted something, for he seemed uneasy; and pretty soon he sent Allen into the cabin for something, and asked again what the trouble was, when I told him all.

"The captain was a big, brave man, but he trembled when I told my story.

"If we should put back for port it would arouse the villains and they would make short work of us, and, as it was, our show was a small one.

"In a moment, however, the captain asked if I thought I could carry a steady hand in a tight fix; and telling him I could, for I knew our lives were depending on it, his eyes flashed as he said:

"Good, my boy! If you don't fail me, we will flax the scoundrels, or my name isn't Joe Warrenton. Keep up your courage, do as I say, and fifteen hundred dollars are yours."

"The captain was a powerful man, and, now that he understood the game, I knew the desperadoes would have a hard fight to carry out their purposes. If Allen only had been all right we should have stood an even chance, though we had no fire-arms aboard.

"Seeing Allen coming up the companion way at that moment, Warrenton motioned for me to take the helm, and hurried to meet the sailor just as he gained the deck.

"Before the traitor saw what was coming, the captain seized him by the throat and bore the wretch to the deck, just as if he had been a child, without any outcry escaping his lips.

"Getting a piece of tarred rope and some bunting we gagged and bound the ruffian in a few moments.

"There," said Captain Warrenton, triumpantly, "our way is clear. But these other scamps will be moving soon so we must be ready for them."

"While the hatches were on we knew the villains' only way of escape was the fore-peak, and as the boards of the bulkhead were thin they would easily force a way through. The cargo was so stowed that they could not reach the cabin bulkhead, and they could not force the hatches, so that we felt confident that that would be their course.

"As it was then time that they might be moving and the wind was so we had it on our beam, thus leaving but little to do for the sails, the captain got a couple of heavy hand-spikes for our weapons, and we were ready for action on the part of our foes.

"Soon after dark the skipper said he heard them removing a board from the bulkhead.

"Captain Warrenton had cautiously crawled forward behind the bitts by the bow-sprit, weapon in hand, and now motioned to me to leave the helm and join him. The tiller was lashed so that all was safe in that quarter.

"The night was starlight and just light enough for our purpose.

"I had barely time to reach the bitts which I had done in silence, when the scoundrels were moving in the rubbish in the fore-peak.

"Pretty soon a couple of human heads came into sight, and then the villains stood upon deck not four feet from where we were.

"The captian touched me, and I knew the time for action had come.

"While the rascals stood for an instant as if trying to see where we were, we sprung upon them.

"I seemed to possess ten times my ordinary strength, I had nerved myself up so, and you may believe I put all my power into a blow. However, the villain saw me in season to partially dodge it, so that it fell upon his shoulder, and the next I knew he had sprung upon me.

"But my second clip, which I was not long in dealing, fetched him; and as he fell, Warrenton turned to help me, he having fixed his man at a single stroke.

"It was a good while before I could realize that we had really overcome the burly desperadoes; but, there they were, securely bound; and, in spite of their threats and entreaties, we put back to port and gave them up to the authorities, receiving the reward of three thousand dollars, which the captian generously shared with me.

"Ned Allen received his just punishment, while both of the others afterward exptated their crimes on the gallows.

"Readily procuring a couple of new hands, we again put to sea, none the worse for our little adventure."

Advice to Husbands.

You have no right to take the pleasures of the home without also taking its responsibilities. You owe something to your children besides food, shelter, clothing and education. He who gives them only this makes his house only a half-orphans' asylum. Every father ought to father his own children. The evening hour ought to be the children's. I know you have come home tired; I know the day has been one long battle, and that you are weary with questions to be answered and problems to be solved. But I also know that the best way to lay down business cares is to take up home cares; that the best way to keep young is to give an hour every day after supper to the children—to their sports, their studies, their life-problems and their life-joys. He that giveth his life shall save it. But were it otherwise, it is unheroic, unchivalric, cowardly, to run away and leave all the cares of the children at night on the same shoulders which have borne them all the day. You owe something else to your wife than a house and money to keep it a going. You would owe this to a housekeeper. To leave her every evening and go off to the gossip of your club or of the village store is not keeping your promise to leave all others and cleave only unto her. To leave her to sit in loneliness while the azy clock ticks the hours away is not keeping your promise to comfort and to cherish her. When you took her from her father's home you bound yourself to provide her with a new one, and you do not fulfil that pledge in providing her a cell, however luxurious it may be, for the lonely life of a married old maid. No wife ought to be left by her husband to be a nun. Put yourself in her place. Send her off for a week on a visit; spend your evenings alone—six of them will be enough for an experiment—and see how you like it. Or if you cannot persuade her to desert you for even a week, though you have deserted her for many weeks, perhaps many a month, imagine your positions reversed. Imagine her going off to her club, her sewing circle, her gossip with a neighbor, night after night, leaving you to sit alone in your solitary room—a married old bachelor. How would you like it? Why is not sauce for the goose sauce also for the gander? How does your life look to you when measured by the Golden Rule? Are you doing to the one you profess to love best as you would have her do to you?

It Sounded Funny.

Scotch Highlanders have the habit when talking their English of interjecting the personal pronoun "he" where not required, such as 'the King he has come.' Often, in consequence a sentence is rendered extremely ludicrous A gentleman says he lately listened to the Rev. Mr.—, who began his discourse thus: 'My friends, you will find my text in the first epistle general of Peter, fifth chapter and eighth verse: 'The devil he goeth about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour.' Now, my brethren, for our instruction I have divided my text into four heads. Firstly, we shall endeavor to ascertain who the devil he was. Secondly, we shall inquire into his geographical position, namely, "where the devil he was and where the devil he was going? Thirdly, who the devil he was seeking. And fourthly and lastly, we shall endeavor to solve a question which has never yet been solved—what the devil he was 'roaring about.'

Amelia (looking into a toy-shop window)—'What lovely dolls." Gallant dude—'They look sweet enough to kiss.' Amelia—'Yes; if I felt for kissing just now I would kiss one of those dolls.'

It Didn't Suit Her.

'But why don't you get married?' said a bouncing girl, with a laughing eye, to a smooth-faced, innocent-looking youth.

'Well, I——' said the youth, stopping short with a gasp, and fixing his eyes on vacancy, with a puzzled and foolish expression.

'Well, go on,' said the fair questioner, almost imperceptibly inclining nearer to the young man. 'Now just tell me right out—you what?'

'Why, I—pshaw! I don't know.'

'You do—I say you do! Now, come, I want to know.'

'Oh, I can't tell you——'

'I say you can. Who, you know I'll never mention it: and you may tell me, of course, you know—for havn't I always been your friend?'

'Well, you have, I know,' replied the beleagured youth.

'And I'm sure I always thought you liked me,' went on the maiden, in tender and mellow accents.

'Oh, I do. upon my word—yes, indeed, I do, Maria!' said the unsophisticated youth, very warmly; and he found that Maria had unconsciously placed her hand in his open palm.

There was a silence.

'And then—well?' said Maria, dropped her eyes to the ground.

'Eh! Oh—well!' said John, dropped his eyes and Maria's hand at the same time.

'I'm pretty sure you love somebody,' said Maria, assuming a tone of raillery; 'I know you're in love; and, John, why don't you tell me all about it at once?'

'Well—I——'

'Well, I—oh, you silly mortal! what is there to be afraid of?'

'Oh, it ain't because I am afraid of anything at all; and I'll—well, now, Maria, I'll tell you.'

'Well, now, John?'

'I——'

'Eh?'

'I——'

'Yes.'

'I AM in love!—now don't tell; you won't will you?' said John, violently seizing Maria by the hand, and looking at her face with a most imploring expression.

'Why, of course, you know, John, I'll never breath a word about it: you know I won't—don't you, John?'

This was spoken in a mellow whisper, and the cherry lips of Maria were so near John's ear when she spoke, that, had he turned his head to look at her, there might have occured a dangerous collision.

'Well, Maria,' said John, 'I have told you now, and so you shall know all about it. I have always thought a great deal of you, and——'

'Yes, John.'

'I am sure you would do anything for me that you could?'

'Yes, John, you know I would.'

'Well, I thought so, and you don't know how long I've wanted to talk to you about it.'

'I declare, John, I—you might have told me long since if you wanted to—for I am sure I never was angry with you in my life.'

'No, you weren't; and I had often a great mind to—but——'

'It's not too late now, you know, John.'

'Well, Maria, do you think I am too young to get married?'

'Indeed I do not, John; and I know it would be a good thing for you too; for everybody says that the sooner young people get married the better, when they are prudent and inclined to love one another.'

'That's just what I think; and now, Maria, I do want to get married; and if you'll——,

'Indeed I will, John—for you know I was always partial to you—and I've said so often and often behind your back.'

'Well, I declare, I have all along thought you would oject, and that's the reason I've been afraid to ask you.'

'Object? No, I'll die first. You may ask of me anything you please,'

'And you'll grant it?'

'I will.'

'Then, Maria, I want you to pop the question for me to Mary Sullivan, for——'

'What?'

'Eh?'

'Do you love Mary Sullivan?'

'Oh! indeed I do, with all my heart!'

'I always thought you were a fool!'

'Eh?'

'I say you're a fool! and you'd better go home—your mother wants you! Oh, you—you—you stupid!' exclaimed the mortified Maria, in a thrill tremble; and she gave John a slap on the cheek that sent him reeling.

John went his way in a state of perplexity, wondering what in thunder Maria could get so mad about.

'Say, Bill, where dy'e git them long cigars?' Outside the Brunswick. When a dude buys a first-class cigar he takes about two puffs, gits sick and throws it away, an' I lay fur it. Betcher life dudes wasn't created fur nothin'.'

Did it ever occur to you, among the general fluctuations of prices, that umbrellas "go up" oftener than anything else?

Money in Frogs.

The game laws are very strictly enforced in New Jersey, and the offenders are so severely punished that it is not a 'paying' business to take game out of season. A hunter ever there when asked how the professional hunters found employment during the portion of the year when they were prohibited from killing birds and animals, said:

'Oh, some of us go to work on the farms, but a few turn our attention to hunting frogs and reptiles.'

'How can you make any money by that kind of hunting?'

'Easy enough. There is considerable money in frogs.'

'Can you sell them?'

'Yes, to some extent. There are restaurants in New York, Philadelphia and other cities where frogs are a dainty dish, much in demand, as the hind legs of the frog are the only portions of the creature that are eaten, a great many frogs are necessary for a meal for a hungry person.'

'How do you catch frogs?'

'We capture the creature by means of a long pole, at the end of which is a small net. It is not very difficult to catch a frog. You see one of them sitting upon a log or a stone at the side of a pond or creek. Poor froggie sits there winking, blinking and dozing away, entirely unconscious of approaching danger. You slyly reach out with your net and scoop in the frog. Nothing is more simple. No stradegy is required.'

'A big bullfrog must be a great prize,' the reporter observed.

'That's just where you are mistaken,' said the informant. 'The big bullfrogs are not as good eating as the little fellows. By the term little fellows I don't mean the creatures which have only just emerged from the tadpole state, but those which are about half-grown.'

'You have spoken of hunting diffrent kinds of reptiles. Do you mean snakes?'

'Yes; but that part of the business is nearly played out. There was a time not long ago when snakeskins were in demand. We sold the skins to taxidermasts and to other purchasers, who used them for various purposes. There is one kind of snake which makes very wholesome and delicious food.'

'And what kind of snake may that be?'

'The rattlesnake.'

'Where is the rattlesnake eaten?'

'To some extent in western New Jersey and some portions of Pennsylvania. Rattle snake tastes very much like an eel, as I can testify from my own personal experience.'

Hotel Thieves.

Willie Howe reclined gently on a fawn-colored divan at the Palmer house Chicago, and was inhaling a cigarette as the police reporter gave him a pleasant "Hellow, mister!" and, in an absent manner, scraped his muddy feet on the beautiful silk-velvet carpet.

'Great guns! young fellow,' said the reclining figure; 'please retire; have your personel attractions polished, and then return; first having your card sent to me on a silver salver.'

The scribe retired unabashed for he had heard of lofty manners and antiquated customs, and went through a bath, visited a barber, stood monarch over a bootblack, and then returned.

'I had the most, vulgar-appearing fellow here a while ago,' commenced Mr. Howe, but he was interrupted by the reporter with:

Beg pardon; please don't be too personal. I hope I appear in a satisfactory condition. 'Then with profuse apologies for not recognizing him, the host dismissed the subject.

So you want to know if we are troubled with burglars and sneak-thieves?' interrogated Mr. Howe, after the reporter had explained his mission. 'Well, I am happy to say that we are not, and have not been since last winter. The last hotel thieves that bothered us any are now safely housed at Joliet, and no others care about following in their path. You see, a hotel thief is generally an inconsequential fellow in the annals of crime, for if he were not he would not take such great risks for a paltry watch, an over-coat, a satchel, or a small sum of money—none of which would bring him over $20 or $30. If he ever succeeds in securing that much for his plunder he is extremely lucky. It is seldom the hetel thief gets a big stake, for travellers generally leave their valuables, not around their rooms, but in the vault, and it is generally minor articles that are taken. It is very seldom that they get over $20 in cash. Some of these thieves will follow a man for miles. I have known of cases where a jewelry man with a large line of samples would be followed all the way from New York. They generally take excellent care of their goods, however, and never leave them in a room without a watchman. Hotel thieves never pick locks, always watching a chance to slip into a room when the door is unlocked and the occupant has stepped out for a moment.'

'No, sir, I don't hire out to that farmer. His confounded fences are all barbed wire, and I can't get a minute's rest on 'em."

Discovery of Iron and Steel.

In an address on technical training delivered before the alumni association of Lehigh University. Thomas M. Drown pictures the discovery of metallic iron and steel in this way: "Nearly all the early discoveries in the arts were the result of accident or hap-hazard experiment. We can well imagine that a fire large and intense enough to reduce iron from its ore must often have been made in accidental contact with surface ore, and that the presence of the metal in the ashes must have attacted attention. This observation once made, there would follow a series of experiments to determine the conditions under which metal was produced, and the substances necessary for its production. It would not long escape intelligent observation that a certain brown earth, or may be a black rock, was the substance which yielded the metal, and that the fire was the necessary condition of its formation. But the iron thus accidentaliy produced—a mixture of metal, cinder and ashes was of no value till further experiment revealed the fact that the metal could when hot be united by hammering into one mass, with the separation of cinder and other extraneous matter. The discovery of this property prompted still further experiment. The irregularity of the product would suggest the more perfect control of the fire, and smelt furnaces would be built. In the course of time it would be noted that the iron was not uniform in hardness, and an accident would be sure to reveal the fact that sometimes the metal, when suddenly cooled in water, would become intensely hard. This new line of investigation would result in the production of steel."

Hogarth and the Spectre.

Hogarth, the celebrated painter, was an intimate friend of Fielding, and, after his friend's decease, was inconsolable because he had not painted his portrait. One morning, when the artist was working alone in his studio, he thought he heard a voice resembling that of his deceased friend, saying, in a sepulchral tone: 'Hogarth, come and paint me!'

The painter started up; but thinking it was the effect of his imagination, resumed his seat, and went on with his work. Some moments after, he heard distinctly the same voice, repeating the some words. Imagining somebody was playing a trick, he rose quickly from his chair and opened the door of his room; then recoiled with horror on recognizing Fielding, who, advancing toward him, said, in a kind voice:

"Fear nothing, my friend; your complaints have reached my ears. Make haste to catch my features, as I have only a quarter of an hour to remain."

Hogarth, much moved by this strange sight, had hardly time to seize his pencil and sketch the phantom, when it vanished from his sight.

On recovering from the agitation into which he had been thrown by this adventure, he called his servants and asked them if any person had entered the house; but as they all declared that they had seen no one, he was obliged to wait for time to clear up the mystery; taking care, nevertheless, to hang the picture up against the wall of the room, in order to see what effect it would have upon his visitors, nearly all of whom had known Fielding.

It is imposible to express the joy of the artist when he saw the sensation produced by the portrait upon the best amateurs of London; but in spite of this, he still felt uneasy concerning the curious manner in which he had become possessed of it.

He related his adventure to Garrick, the well-known tragedian, from whom he concealed nothing; and greatly was his surprise increased, as subsequently he received the following answer from him:

"For a long time I shared your regrets at not having taken a likeness of Fielding, and finally I resolved to personate your friend, in order to give you an opportunity of doing so."

Although Hogarth was one of Garrick's most ardent admirers, he could only be convinced of the truth of this statement by the repetition of the same scene the following day, by which the actor completely convinted him of his wonderful powers of pantomime. Garrick added, in conclusion:

"I confess I owed my secret entrance to an old servant of yours, whose death not long since freed me from the promise I made him to keep it secret."

HUMOROUS.

A society young lady told her illiterate but wealthy lover that she was going to give a german, and he said that he'd be sure to come, he was very fond of beer.

A small boy who stood gazing wistfully at a large candy man in a city confectioner's window, suddenly exclaimed: 'I could lick that fellow with both hands tied behind my back.'

It Certainly Would.

One day three or four weeks ago a retail grocer over in Jersey sat down with his clerk one evening and said:

'James, I owe New York houses over $3000.'

'Yes sir.'

'We have $2000 in cash in the safe, the stock is all run down, and this would be the time to fail in business.'

It certainly would.'

'But I want a reasonable apology to give my creditors when they come down on us for explanations. See if you can't think of something to-night and let me know in the morning.'

The clerk promised, and the grocer wheeled a chest of tea and a bag of coffee home as a beginning. Next morning when he appeared at the store the safe was open, the cash gone and on the desk was a note from the clerk reading:

'I have taken the $2000 and am prepared to skip. It will be the best excuse in the world for your failing so flat that creditors can't realize 2 cents on the dollar.'

P. GRAY MEEK, Chairman

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State Convention of Philadelphia will assemble in the Opera House, Allentown, at 10 o'clock, A. M., on Wednesday, April 9th, 1884, to nominate a Congressman-at-large, six delegates-at-large to the National Convention and representative electors by the members of the State Convention from the respective congressional districts and to transact such other business as the convention may determine.

W. U. HENSEL.
Chairman Dem. State Com.
J. B. LICHTY, Clerk.

IN a Letter from Chairman Hensel he reqeusts county chairmen, state committee men and delegates elect to the convention to promptly forward their names and address es to him, so that they may be promptly informed of all arrangements for transportation, etc.

The national convention of the National Greenback-Labor Party has been called. It is to convene at Indianapolis, Ind., on Wednesday, May 28th, 1883, to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President.

THE Union county democratic committee will meet on Saturday, March 8th, to elect a delegate to the Allentown convention.

THE Republican State Convention of Ohio will be held at Cleveland, April 23rd and 24th.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 23, 1884.

Business is moving along quietly in Congress, but there are indications that rapid progress will be made hereafter. The committees of the House have been worked like beavers piling up and marking out business for consideration on the floor and when the reports begin to come in there will be lively work. President-making is the chief business of interest outside of Congress, and on the Republican side a greet deal of anxious attention is being given to the contest now going on in the State of New York over the selection of delegates. The friends of Mr. Arthur are straining every nerve to capture a majority of the delegation and hope by that means to secure the solid vote of the State for the man who John Sherman, when Secretary of the Treasury, said was not worthy to be entrusted with the office of collector of the port of New York. But they have found a great deal of strong opposition which develops more and more every day. The tools and methods relied upon by Arthur to secure the State for him are not satisfactory to the better elements of the party. They belong purely to the lowest machine workers and tactics. The strongest point made by the President's friends in his favor is that he has done nothing to offend anybody; and it is true that a large quantity of empty champagne bottles are the sole monuments of Mr. Arthur's official career. He don't even fill vancancies in office when they occur, least the unsuccessful applicants should be against him, but holds them open to promise and trade on for delegates. There are many vacancies which have been accumulating for several months and old politicians are beginning to remark that the President is overdoing the thing and that it will finally do him more hurt than good.

In this connection I may state that Mr. Springer's proposition for an amendment to the Constitdtion, making the Presidential term six years, and and rendering the President ineligible to reelection for the next succeeding term, is received with great favor. It provides for a direct vote for President in each State, and abolishes the electorial college. Each State shall have a number of votes equal to the number of its Representatives and Senators in Congress, to be given to each candidate in proportion to the total vote cast for each. The term of Representatives in Congress is fixed at three years, and Congress shall meet each year on the first Wednesday in January, the first session to convene in the January succeeding the November election. There are many considerations to recommend these changes, not the least of which would be raising the Presidential office and administration to something above a scheming machine for the succession.

Some idea of the danger we are approaching through the destruction of our forests may be gathered from the facts, reported by one of the first lumber statisticans now living, that the entire stock of standing white pine in the United States does not exceed 80,000,000,000 feet, which includes the small and inferior trees which used to be thought not worth cutting, and 10,000,000,000 feet out of these 80,000,000,000 are cut every year, with the demand steadily increasing. The annual value of the product of our mills as it falls from the saw is $300,000,000, of which white-pine is the chief item. At the lumber-yard from which it is obtained by the customer, the worth of this annual product is 50 per cent more, or $450,000,000. To replace this from other countries, which, by the way, is an impossibility, would require all the tonnage of the world for its transportation, and it would then cost in the yard more than twice what it does now. Here then, we have an annual deficit of $1,000,000,000, to say nothing of the loss from the crippling of manufacturers depending on working wood, and the derangement of the water supply. In Michigan to day, good standing pine bought of the United States Government for $2*50* per acre, is valued at $2*00* per acre, and yet the remorseless slaughter of our remnant of pine timber goes on at increasing speed; and the cut of last year was the greatest ever known One out of the eight year's supply is thus entirely taken away, and the end is therefore close at hand unless we begin to economize. These are cold facts to which Congress should promptly apply remedial legislation. PHONO.

Miscellaneous.

The Edgar Thompson steel mill, near Pittsburg, made 709 tons of rails in 24 hours recently.

Agents of the United Statet fish commission have just deposited 3,000,000 white fish in Lake Erie at Erie.

The total production of coal in the lower Luzerne and Carbon district during 1883 was 5,666,767 tons, an increase over the previous year of 306,270 tons.

Jack Kehoe, while in jail awaiting trial and execution, shaved a block of coal into the shape and appearance of a Bible. The relic of the King Mollie is now in possession of a Reading man.

All the mines belonging to the Susquehanna Coal Company resumed work at Nanticoke last Monday and ten hours will constitute a day's work instead of nine as heretofore. The miners and laborers rejoice in consequence.

It is said the T. C. Henry, once known as the Kansas Wheat King, has made a million and a half of dollars since going to Colorado, and that his prospects are good to become the governor of that state.

A terrible cyclone passed through Cohabo Valley, Alabama, and several counties in Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina, on the 19th, doing immense damage. About 200 people were killed, and numerous buildings demolished.

IT is said that the first thing inquired for by the people imprisoned by the western floods when the relief boats arrived was news. They could wait for food and clothing, but their appetite for the latest news had to be appeased at once.

Some time ago John Scott, of Scottsville, Chester county, bought at public sale an old desk, in which he discovered a secret drawer containing 150 old pennies. One bore the date 1793 and General Snowden, of the Mint, has declared the coin to be worth $100.

The board of army and navy officers appointed to examine the question of the establishment of gun factories in this country report that two such foundries should be established, and that $1,800,000 should be appropriated by Congress.

The Snow-Bound Train.

OTTAWA, March 3.—Archer Baker, general manager of the Canada Pacific railway, who was on the snow-bound train at Bell's Corners from Thursday night until Saturday afternoon, states that 600 men are engaged in clearing away the snow from the imprisoned train. It is impossible for the passengers to leave the train, being upwards of five feet of snow surrounding it.

An Aged Man's Terrible Death.

EASTON, March 3.—James Boyle, one of the first employes of the Lehigh Valley railroad shops in South Easton, was knocked down and crushed to death under the wheels of a locomotive at the works this morning. He was nearly seventy years old, and met his death by stepping on an unprotected crossing in front of a locomotive that was being backed from the round house. Four deaths occurred in his family during the last four years, and his wife and children are left to mourn him. A week ago he recovered from a long spell of sickness.

Horrible Accident at a Railroad Crossing.

WILKESBATRE, March 3.—Two men named Shear and Brumier, residing in Upper Lehigh, while crossing the tracks of the L. V. R. R. at White House this evening were struck by the midnight express and hurled a distance of forty or fifty feet. Shear was instantly killed, being horribly mangled. Brumier was fatally injured, his skull being fractured. The two horses attached to their vehicle were killed and the carriage smashed into splinters. The engineer says he did not see the men till he was almost on them.

A Fortune that Came too Late.

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 29.—Charles Hale, for the past ten years an inmate of the Jefferson county, Ohio, poorhouse, on Saturday received notification from a New Haven, Conn., legel firm that through the death of a brother, a large real estate owner in New Haven, he had fallen heir to $50,000. Hale, who is now a white-haired man of 79, and decrepit in body, was a prosperous merchant in Cincinnati, but whiskey and gambling wrought his ruin. He says the money comes too late, and prefers to end his days in the infirmary. Hale has several wealthy children in various parts of Ohio.

THE SLATE INDUSTRY of Lehigh and Northampton counties is becoming an interest of no mean proportions. The growing scarcity of timber suitable for shingles and the steadily increasing tendency to the use of brick and stone for buildings, both in city and country, have given the roofing-slate business a regular boom during the past few years. As Pennsylvania possesses the best slate quarries in the United States a good deal of attention has been paid of late by railway corporations to securing a foothold in the slate country, not so much for what the business is at present as for what it promises to be in the future. The output was greater during the past year than ever, and new quarries are still being opened. It is very evident that the slate product of the state is soon to figure among its most important sources of wealth.

CAUGHT BY AN ICE FLOE.
An Exciting Scene on the Blue Juniata.

A gentleman from Juniata county, states that on Sunday last two young men, one a son of Wm. G. Thompson, at present at Thompsontown, made a miraculous escape from death. It appears that the river was closed with ice at some places and open at others. The two young men, one Elbridge Sellers and the other Thompson, attempted to cross at one of the unfrozen spots, but when half way over the ice above them broke and in a few minutes their frail boat was hemmed in by the huge cakes of ice and being carried down stream. Their dangerous position was seen by some people on the bank. A dog was procured, a rope tied to his neck and he then sent to the young men in the boat. He reached them with the rope but in the endeavor to pull them to shore the rope broke and the dog could not be induced to return. Thompson then got out of the boat and attempted to walk to shore on the cakes of ice. They were rotten and he soon found himself floundering in the water and every effort to crawl out upon the ice unsuccessful. After a great effort he succeeded in getting close enough to shore to be rescued in an almost benumbed condition, Sellers stuck to the boat. It was shoved about by the ice but not upset, and after going down stream for fully a mile the current took it to such a position that the young man was tendered aid. The accident is said to have been one of the most exciting, that has taken place in that section for years, as few who witnessed it expected to see either of the young men saved.

Where School Books Come From.

In a country where the schools are so numerous and education so universal as in the United States, the printing of the needed books must of necessity be an important business. Further, taking into consideration that these books are subjected to more wear and tear than any other class of publications, strengthens the first impression that the school-book publishing business must be a very wide-spread one. Strange to say, such is not the case; there are only about twenty-five firms in the United States that make a specialty of publishing school books. These do an average annual business of $8,000,000. Nearly all of the school-book publishing firms are in Northern and Eastern cities, there being but three South or West of Philadelphia and Baltimore. New York City has the bulk of the business, and two-thirds of all the school-books in use are issued by five firms. Of the two Western firms, Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., of Cincinnatti, do a yearly business of $1,500,000. One New York establishment—Ivson, Phinney & Co.—does a trade equally large; A. S. Barnes & Co., also of New York, are put down at $1,300,000 per annum for school books.

Profits on school books are not as great as generally supposed. the expenses of preparing the volumes being large. The leading New York firms in the trade spent liberal sums to have books "introduced," and frequently they are discarded, after a brief use, for something newer and better—something nearer to the time. The rapid changes in our restless age—changes in geography and the sciences—naturally affect the school book and render standard text-books almost an impossibility.—Printers Circular.

——Mrs. William Watchman, Mrs. Thomas Ewing, Mrs. David Thomas and the widow Richardson, and two children, all of Houtzdale, spent the whole of Tuesday night of last week in the woods in Woodward township, Clearfield county, having been caught by a heavy storm on their return from a visit to friends at Whiteside run, on the Moshannon branch railroad. They became completely bewildered, and although only a few hundred yards from the house of Mr. Hendershot, could not find their way out. The ladies, however, are recorded as having acted heroically, especially Mrs. Watchman, the mother of the widow Richardson, and the children were protected from the element at the expense of the others. In the morning they made their way to Mr. Hendershot's house, where they were kindly received and given a good breakfast, after which they were taken to Houtzdale in a wagon, just escaping death from a falling tree on the road. It was a night that the ladies and the little ones will long remember.—Bellefonte Watchman.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN.

The Enforcement of the Act on the Subject to be Investigated.

Secretary Crew, of the Pennsylvania Society to protect Children from Cruelty, the head office of which is in Philadelphia, received a letter from Charles T. Peck, commissioner of labor statistics in New York, stating that he has decided to investigate the subject of child labor in that state, and asking for information about the work. Mr. Crew, in reply, refers to the crusade which the society has been making against mill and factory owners throughout the state, and shows what has been done toward rescuing the children. About five hundred circular letters containing the act were sent out, to which replies were received informing the society that all operatives under the age specified in the act had been discharged. An agent was afterward sent out, and he found that nearly all the employers had complied with the notice. The number of children discharged through the interference of the society was about 5,000. Mr. Crew states that he intends to extend his field of operations, and to send his agents all over the state to compel factory owners to comply with the law.

—Mrs. Catherine Orndorf of Woodward will sell at public sale on Thursday, March 20th, 1884 some fine live stock and farming implements. See bills.

—Subscribers to the JOURNAL who contemplate changing their places of residence will please notify us of the change, giving the name of their post office.

—Lulu, a little daughter of J. W. Snook, is recovering from a severe spell of sickness. She is a very interesting child and we sincerely hope she may be restored to full health.

—Michael Frank's sale comes off March 18th. There will be some excellent horses, cows, shoats, wagons, agricultural implements and household goods sold.

—Mr. A. J. Harter bought the lot south of the Luth. Church on Penn St., of Messrs. Jno. Harter and S. D. Musser and contemplates erecting a house on it this summer.

—Dinges, Vonada & Co., the enterprising merchants at Coburn, have a brand new and tip top clerk in the person of Robert Sechler, of Mifflinburg.

—Several citizens of Millmont, Union county, have made arrangements to start a packing box and planing mill in the shop formerly occupied by M. Halfpenny.

—Emanuel Bower will make sale of valuable live stock and farm implements on the 12th of March, at his residence in Penn township, about 2½ miles west of Millheim.

—We are the only party handling the Celebrated Rochester Clothing in Penn's Valley. All who once wear these goods will have no other. Dinges, Vonada & Co.

—Mr. G. W. Harter bought S. D. Musser's property at the lower end of Main Street and intends moving to town in the spring. Come along Wash, we welcome you as a neighbor.

—On Monday the 17th of March, there will be exposed to public sale by Mr. Wilson Haines, one mile west of Woodward, live stock and farm implements.

—The convention is in full blast, many singers taking part in it. The concerts this and to-morrow evening promise to be rich treats and it would be well for lovers of music to attend them.

—Splendid live sock and good farming implements will be sold at public sale by G. W. Harter on his premises near Millheim oy Thursday, March 13th 1884. See Bills.

—We are reliably informed that we are to have a telephone line connecting this place and Bellefonte by the first of May. That shows that Millheim is progressing with the times,

—J. C. Smith, executor of the late H. G. Smith will sell at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Smith in Penn township, on Saturday, March 22nd, some live stock, farm implements and household goods.

—The carpenters have completed their job on W. N. Auman's house on Penn Street, and he expects to occupy it as soon as the painters are through with it. Glad to get you for our next door neighbor, William.

—The public sale of the personal property of Dr Hillbish, late of Rebersburg, deceased, will take place on the 11th of March. Doctors and Druggists will find it to their interest to attend this sale.

—H. W. Kreamer's sale of personal property comes off, Tuesday March 7th. He has a splendid assortment of farming implements and most excellent live stock. Henry's sale should be a good one.

—The new meat market with Mr. John Miller of Centre Hall as manager, does a thriving business. As meat seems to be scarce this year, that shop will be largely patronized this coming spring and summer.

—There will be a party at Mr. S. D. Musser's this evening to celebrate the birthday of their oldest daughter, Mabel. Cards of invitation have been sent to all her school companions and the girls expect to put in a glorious time.

—Our friend, D. H. Rote of Aaronsburg, gave us a pleasant call on Monday. Dan has not been out much since the holidays, his health having been in a poor condition. Hope he will become well and strong again in the near future.

—Mr. J. Willis Musser has bought out the stage route from Woodward to Millheim, but also goes to Coburn every morning. He carries express and other goods from all points along the line at very moderate charges, and continues the calf and poultry business.

tf

—On Friday March 21st, H. A. Mingle's executor's sale of the personal property of George Bollinger's estate at Aaronsburg will take place. A very large lot of partly finished material for chairmaking will be sold, beside a lot of household goods.

—Every winter has been the worst one, in certain particulars, but this is one of the worst of the roughest. The wind is as piercing as a bullet and seems to be determined to investigate the temperature of your skin, no matter how many coverings you wear.

—Mr. Jacob Dutwiler, whose large farm is located along the turnpike about 1 mile south of Millheim, will make sale of his live stock, farming implements and household goods on Wednesday, March 19th, 1884. He expects to move to Jewel county, Kansas, soon after the sale.

MUSIC SCHOOL.—The 24th session of the Musical College at Freeburgh, Pa., will begin on Tuesday morning, April 29th, and will continue six weeks. For circular address

F. C. MOYER,
Musical Director.

—Simon Rote of Aaronsburg received a paralytic stroke paralizing his entire right side, while engaged in chopping wood on the mountain on Monday afternoon. The only person with him at the time was a little boy, who took the horse and sleigh and started for help. He met three young men who were hunting and they went back to Mr. Rote, put his coat on him and wrapped him up in their own overcoats, the one supporting his head while he lay on the snow covered ground until help arrived and they took him home.

—If you need anything in the line of School or Blank Books, Bibles, Sunday School Cards, Paper and Envelopes, bear in mind that the Journal Store on Penn street is the place to buy those things. Give us a call.

—The new organ recently purchased by the Salem's Reformed church will be dedicated to the service of God, next Sunday morning. The Rev. J. F. DeLong of Bellefonte will be present to preach the sermon.

—The new town council had its first meeting last Monday evening and elected Mr. Adolph Miller, President and Jacob Eisenhuth, Esq., Secretary, which certainly is a good selection all around. Their regular place of meeting will be in one of the schoolrooms.

—Mr. John Kerstetter, Jr., still makes a business of doing special jobs at carpentry. John is really an expert at the business and has large experince, both in making out plans, specifications and drawings, as well as a practical workman. People who entrust their work into his hands can safely rely on having it done in best style at the lowest prices. tf

—Hon. J. G. Larimer, Associate Judge of this county, died at his home in Pleasant Gap on Sunday, Frebruary 24th, aged 63 years. This makes another vacancy in the judgeship of our county to be filled by appointment. The names of several gentlemen have been presented to Gov. Pattison.

—H. J. Kurzenknabe is well started in his work of giving musical instructions and has a fair number of scholars. He wishes to inform the public that he makes a specialty of tuning and repairing instruments and persons having any work in that line will find him fully competent for it.

—Mr. P. S. Meyer will take charge of the Pine Creek Mill, of which Snook & Motz are the proprietors, by the first of April and requests his many friends to give him a call. He expects to do his work in the most satisfactory manner and his customers will always find him an accomodating and first-class miller.

TAKE NOTICE.—Mr. H. K. Luse hereby respectfully informs the public that he has a large lot of seed potatoes known as the "White Elephant Potato" for sale at his residence at Millheim. We are in possession of a basket full of these potatoes and can give them a warm recommendation as the best yielding potatoe in the market. If you are in need of any seed potatoes do not fail to call on him. tf

TURNPIKE ELECTION.—Take notice that an election will be held by the stockholders of the Bellefonte, Aaronsburg and Youngman's town Turnpike Company, on TUESDAY MARCH 11th, 1884, at Hosterman's Hotel in Woodward, Centre Co., between the hours of 10 A. M. and 2 P. M., of the said day.

By order of the Board.
DANIEL RUNKEL.
President.

—In another column you will find the changed advertisement of Mauck's furniture establishment. They have been doing a flourishing business ever since they opened their new shops and they are noted for always keeping excellent goods. Mauck's is the cheapest place to buy Furniture, Wall Paper, &c. A trial will convince you.

—Mr. Ralph Musser, of White Deer Mills, Union county, was in town last week attending the funeral of his departed mother. Before returning home he called at the JOURNAL office, and we found him to be an intelligent and social gentleman, whom we will be glad to meet again. Beside that, we hear that he is a capital miller and has no difficulty in always getting the best positions.

—A correspondent of the Lewisburg Saturday News writes:

We have very kind men in this vicinity. They stay at home and mind the babies and let their wives attend the public sales.

That kind of men are scarce up our way and as far as the wives are concerned we suppose they prefer the warm coal stove at home to attending sales on cold and stormy days.

—We notice in the Manhatten, (Kansas) Republic that Rev. J. A. Bright of Ellsworth, is the Grand Chaplain of the I. O. O. F. in that state and that he delivered the principal oration at the dedication of a new Odd Fellows' hall at Manhatten. Brother Bright seems to be working up to high positions in said order, presumably because there is multum in parvo.

SPRING MILLS ITEMS.

On Monday morning the thermometor stood at 3 below zero.

Mr. James N. Leitzell, Auctioneer is making himself quite a reputation. He has sales to cry in the western part of the county. Good for you Jim.

Assistant at the station will have to consult Webster somewhat more on the way of spelling "Flouer" an article of food.

Messrs. Crawford & Confer have opened a branch tailoring establishment in Grenobles Hall, All work guaranteed, come along gentlemen.

Mr. & Mrs. C. E. Aurand lost a very interesting little girl by death. The child is not lost only gone before and may the parents look to our heavenly father, for in him we shall find consolation. We extend our sympathies to the bereaved family.

BROAD AXE.

—The Central Pa. Conference of the Evangelical Asscoiation will hold an annual session at Milton commencing Thursday morning March 6th. Bishop Esher of Chicago will preside. The presiding elder will be elected and recommendations for changes in the dicipline of the church will be acted upon.—Lewisburg Saturday News.

This body numbers about one hundred ministers, embracing all that territory extending from the Allegheny ridges to the North and West Branches of the Susquehanna, and from the New York State line to the State of Maryland south. The Revs Hengst & Benfer of this place are both in attendance.

—The "Millheim Musical Association" was organized on Friday evening last in the chapel of the Luth. Church with a membership of twenty seven. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—J. F. Harter; Vice President—Mrs. J. W. Stover; Secretary—J. H. B. Hartman; Treasurer—Mrs. A. J. Harter and Conductor—H. J. Kurzenknabe. The evening wes an exceedingly cold and unpleasant one and many that were invited were kept at home by the severe weather, but are expected to join at the next meeting on Saturday evening. Those present manifested much interest in the progress of the society and expressed themselves willing to do their full share in making it a success.

NOTICE.—A special meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will be held in the grammar school room, Millheim, on Tuesday evening, March 11th, All those taking an interest in the good work, and especially those who gave their signatures as members will please be present. The officers of the association as has been stated before are J. G. W. Herald, President, A. J. Harter, Vice President, D. L. Zerby, Secretary and D. A. Musser, Treasurer. The devotional exercises to take place on Sunday afternoon, March 9th will consist of bible readings to be led by A. J. Harter. All are cordially invited to attend.

By order of the Y. M. C. A.,
J. G. W. HERALD.
President.

Echoes from Coburn.

Wonder who writes the echoes.

Gorilla changed his name in the Democrat to Leo.

Mr. Samuel Ulrich is off to Harrisburg for a few days.

Mr. F. Hosterman and G. Weaver, were sojourning among us on Monday. They had expected to go to Philadelphia but missed the train in the morning.

Mr. Grenninger's Store is the boss place to have fun in the evening. Amon handles the violin with a vengeance.

I. J. Grenoble got in a lot of bran and cloverseed for his many customers.

The cold has put a stop to the building business for this week.

Mr. Wilson from Mifflinburg took possession of Stover's Grain house this week and will run the business in first-class style.

Mr. Runk from Spring Mills was here on Tuesday. Another one that missed the train.

Mr. R. T. Sechler, salesman for D. V. & Co., appears to be a first-class fellow. He is another Bob; how shall we distinguish the two Bobs now.

SCRIBE.

Splinters from Madisonburg.

A little more rain and snow last week.

Last Friday night was supposed to have been the coldest night here during the winter.

The protracted meeting in the Evangelical church at this place is still in progress.

Mr. Luther Stover and family from near Woodward, moved to this place on last Thursday.

The teachers of our public schools are holding an exhibition at the close of the term. Preparations are already being made to make it a success.

Mr. Dewitt Johnson, wife and mother-in-law, Mrs. Bitner from Lock Haven spent a few days at Mr. Andrew Ocker's last week. I am certain they had a very nice time, as all the attention possible was shown them, in order to make their visit a pleasant one.

The report of our Primary school taught by Mr. W. T. Auman, for the fourth month ending Feb 28th, is as follows:

No. of pupils enrolled—Males 22; Females—18, total—40; daily attendance—Males—19; Females—17; total—39; Average per cent of attendance—Males—91; Females—97; total—84. Names of pupils present every day during the month: Alice Hazel, Teresta Hazel, Lizzie Hazel, Sallie Kern, Ida Hockman, Katie Bierly, Esther Shaffer, Della Rishel, Oscar Royer, George Noll, Willie Weidmeyer, Samuel Reber, Byron Hazel, Chas. Hazel, Kline Miller, Thomas Bartges. No. of visitors during the month 37. ANON.

DIED.

On the 3rd, inst., Jessie S. only child of C. E. & Kate Aurand, aged about 5 months.

The Reading Hardware Company's foundries, which have been idle for two months, have started again, with forty non-union moulders, who take the place of the men who struck against a reduction in wages of ten per cent. The sheet mill of the Reading Iron Works has also resumed operations, with a full set of hands, after a stoppage of six weeks for necessary repairs.

—For fine Monuments and Headstones the Millheim Marble Works is the leading and best place in the county. tf

A Practical Fruit-Grower Gives Advice of a Useful Nature.

In setting trees, especially the apple, to insure free growth and success, the following requisites are essential in their selection:

1. See to the thriftiness of the scions, or young trees. The bark of both trunk and branches should be straight and the branches well balanced.

2. Trees with bad crotches, of those having equal division of two branches near the upper part of the trunk should always be discarded, as they will invariably split down and ruin the tree when loaded with fruit.

3. As to the proper age of scions, or trees for transplanting, those of one or two years are old enough. They are more apt to live and grow freely than larger ones that have their roots much shortened, bruised and injured in taking them up, and less labor and care is required in setting them.

4. The trees should be stocky. Trees crowded in nursery rows (as is often the case) are generally spindling and slender. Discard these or take as few as possible.

5. Trees over two years old should be marked, and the side that grows to the north in setting, should be placed to that point. The reason is plain. If the position is changed the bark has also to undergo a change, which is detrimental to growth and health. Every farmer knows the difference in both wood and bark, between the north and south sides of trees.

6. Some young nursery trees have all their roots on one side. Such trees will invariably topple over or careen to such an extent as to render them almost worthless.

7. Select your trees, if possible, from the nearest reliable nursery.

As an appendage to the above we would remark that we have lost more trees by sun-scald than from all others combined. The injury is mostly to trees from four to six years old that lean to the northeast, caused by the 3 o'clock sun in July and early in August. The tree with exposed trunk is blistered and scalded, the worms get to work, the bark will peal off and the tree might as well be removed and a new one set in its place.

Remedies: 1. Low heads. 2. The protection board—Take two boards 3 feet long by 8 inches wide; nail the ends together at right angles, place the upper arm, that points to the zenith, close up to the trunk; put a flat rock on the other part or pin it to the ground with a cedar pin with a head.

After spring planting, if the trees are exposed to high winds, place flat rocks around their stems, and no staking is necessary.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

A little boy was asked by his mother to go to the store and get some eggs. He went, and on his return he dropped them. His mother asked him if he had broken any of them. He replied: 'No; but the shells came off of some.'

He had been "Out West."

I had supposed that the far West was a new Garden of Eden, and that one had but to venture there to gain the wealth of a Monte Cristo. I met at the Union station a man whom I imagined was by this time a bonanza king, as he went Westward years ago. But if he is a nabob he is traveling incog., and his conversation is not calculated to stimulate Western excursions. He wore a shabby ulster, long hair and a pensive, searching expression of sympathy. He greeted me as an old acquaintance at once.

"Well," I queried, "how do you like the West?"

"I like it just well enough," said he, "to remain in the East the remainder of my days. I tell you, the East is good enough for any man who hasn't a life and death dispute with the law on hand. In the East a man above the average in smartness can get along; but go West and you find no drones. Every man you meet is on the dead run for wealth and you must stay up late, rise up early and bolt your meals to keep up with the stragglers in the procession. There's lots of money West, and big wages. I have just come from Colorado, where I got $10 a day for driving a mule team. But—"

"That is a very good salary for that kind of labor?"

"Oh! it is, is it? Well, you go out there and see. Why, my friend, I have paid $1.50 for a cup of coffee, 2.75 for a glass of beer, and $4 for a horn-handled jack-knife with one blade. I have been in the mountains with a party when a chew of tobacco was put up at a raffle, at a dollar a chance, and if the winner of the tobacco finally got away with it he had to dodge the contents of the revolvers of the party and keep out of sight for a week. Talk about the West to me! It is a good place to die in; but I propose to live from this time out where the sun rises early, and there is no corner on the luxuries of life!"

They say dogs can't reason, but no one will doubt that a dog tries to reach a conclusion when he chases his tail.

To Farmers of Pennsylvania:

Gentlemen:—For over twenty-eight years we have manufactured Raw-Bone Phosphates, and our brands have become household words in nearly every section of the country. In many communities the demand for them has increased, while in others the sales have declined. On account of the preference for lower-priced goods. Six years ago, finding that the demand for goods of lower cost had become almost universal, and having peculiar advantages of raw materials and manufacturing facilities, we determined to meet this demand, and introduced a TWENTY-FIVE DOLLAR PHOSPHATE, made by a NEW PROCESS EXCLUSIVELY OUR OWN. The quickness with which this Phosphate sprang into use among intelligent farmers will be shown by the following statement:

Of the $25 Phosphate there were sold

During	1879,	1,287	Tons.
"	1880,	3,951	"
"	1881,	5,147	"
"	1882,	8,288	"
"	1883,	10,128	"

The reports of the action of the $25 Phosphate have been satisfactory in every case from a wide inquiry. We want to be informed upon this point very plainly, as it is our interest to know if the article continues to produce good results. We will thank any farmer, having used the $25 Phosphate with disappointing results, to let us hear from him with full facts.

Yours truly,

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and Scrofulous affections—the King of Blood Purifiers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S VEGETABLE WORM DESTROYER is prepared in the form of candy drops, attractive to the sight and pleasant to the taste.
